If we do not complete a transfer to or from your account on time or in the correct amount according to our agreement with you, we will be liable for your losses or damages. However, there are some exceptions. For instance, we are not liable: (1) if, through no fault of ours, you don't have sufficient funds in your account to make the transfer; (2) if the ATM where you are making the transfer does not have enough cash; (3) the funds are subject to legal process or other encumbrance restricting a transfer; (4) if there is a technical malfunction which is known to you at the time you attempt to initiate the transfer or, in the case of a recurring transfer, at the time the transfer should have occurred; (5) if circumstances beyond our control (such as a fire, flood, power outage or communications or computer system failure) prevent the transfer, despite reasonable precautions that we take. In no event are we liable for more than actual damages proved if any failure of ours was unintentional, and resulted from a bona fide error, notwithstanding the maintenance of procedures reasonably adopted to avoid such an error. This does not mean that we accept liability for other circumstances resulting in transfers not being made or completed on time. For example, we are not responsible for delayed or failed transfers if: (1) you fail to use your card properly in accordance with your agreement and any instructions we supply; (2) you exceed applicable restrictions on the number, amount or frequency of transfers; (3) transaction information is lost or delayed in transmission; (4) a bona fide security consideration causes us not to make the transfer, we have reason to believe a transfer is unauthorized, or the transfer would violate other security restrictions in our system; or (5) your deposit account is closed or your card has been terminated or suspended.
